MEMORIAL

OF

INHABITANTS OF ATHENS COUNTY,

In relation to the Currency.

MAY 26, 1834.

Laid upon the table.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States :

The memorial of the subscribers, inhabitants of the county of Athens, State of Ohio,

RESPECTFULLY REPRESENTS :

That although sensible that in ordinary times patriotism is best manifested in the discharge, by every individual, of his own appropriate duties, leaving, in the exercise of a liberal confidence, the management of the public and general interests wholly in the hands of those to whom they have been constitutionally delegated, yet we believe that there are occasions which not only justify, but require a departure from such a course, and which demand from particular portions of the community, and sometimes even from the whole people, the free expression of their sentiments as to the character and practical effect of public measures; and more especially the unreserved declaration of their sufferings and their grievances, their feelings, their wishes, and their will. Such, we believe, is the claim of the present crisis. From our situation, far in the interior, we were not among the first to feel the pressure arising from the general derangement of our money concerns. But we have not been permitted to escape. We already see numerous instances of distress around us on every side. Our present condition is that of perplexity and embarrassment; our prospects are still more gloomy and deplorable.

Almost the whole of our surplus products of the last year, far exceeding in quantity that of any preceding year, of which the transportation is necessarily delayed to wait the rise of the small streams, is now afloat, hopelessly seeking a market on the Ohio and Mississippi, or has already been sacrificed at prices absolutely ruinous; prices which blast the hopes of the future, and spread universal discouragement and despondency.

This sudden change from a state of uncommon prosperity which we lately enjoyed, though not perhaps to be ascribed to any one particular cause exclusively, we believe to have been principally and more immediately produced by the removal of the deposits; a measure equally impolitic in its character, as it has been demonstrated, by experiment, to be desolating in its effects.

And we see no reasonable prospect of relief, but in the immediate abandonment and entire change of a course, now, as we believe, generally acknowledged to be improvident, erroneous, and wrong, if not directly at variance with the spirit of the constitution; and in the restoration of the deposits, and the re-establishment of the well-tested friendly relations with the Bank of the United States, by virtue of which the soundness of the national currency has been maintained, and the general welfare eminently promoted.

Your memorialists do feel bound to complain and protest against the course of the Executive, in regard to that portion of the suffering community who have appealed to his interposition for relief, and more especially the indifference and insensibility so often and emphatically avowed, to the distress and utter ruin of those of our fellow-citizens whom he pleases to denominate as those who are doing business on borrowed capital, (a class comprising, as we believe, more than one-half of those actively engaged in every great department of business,) as highly disrespectful to the whole American people, and unbecoming to the elective head of a nation of freemen.

We are aware that there has been in our country, at times, a propensity to overtrading, and to imprudent and excessive speculation; yet we cannot doubt that the principle of credit, confined within reasonable limits, has not only been found vitally important, but that it is intimately blended with the whole system of active employments and operations, by which the growth and improvement of our whole country, and more especially of the Western States, has been advanced with a rapidity beyond all precedent in the former history of the world.

And we believe that the moral and political effect of the credit system presents a trait of far greater value; that this system has been found eminently to contribute to the elevation of individual character; practically to realize the true republican equality, which must otherwise be a mere phantom of imagination, by affording facilities to men possessing talents, industry, skill, enterprise, sterling merit, wherever found, to acquire that rank and distinction, and to exert that salutary and auspicious influence on society, for which God and nature have qualified them.

Your memorialists will only add that we are deeply involved in difficulty and distress, and that we have no hope of relief but from your honorable bodies alone. If there be any remedy from human means, it is with you, and we implore you to apply it by the adoption of such prompt and efficacious measures as the present crisis requires and demands of you.
